MPP Goal:

We are committed to building a diverse pipeline of future medical doctors that is more representative of the U.S. population.

An Early Outreach Pre-Med & Medical School Readiness Program

Our pipeline programs are delivered in a hybrid format (online and on-campus). We offer students a variety of academic and career experiences, and personalized guidance over the course of our year-round pipeline programs to help students break through the barriers that exist on the path to medical school. Every summer, MPP students participate in a 1, 2, or 3 week summer intensive at a top university. Additionally, students are engaged in weekly virtual online classes for 2-4 hours per week during the academic year.

Delivered through three integrated components:

"Pre" Pre-Med Academic Year Program

(Hybrid: Online/On-Campus)

During the school year, students attend live online classes face-to-face with faculty and other program students via Zoom, for 2-3 hours per week, typically on the weekend, for 35 weeks. In addition, students meet in-person on a university campus, every other month on Saturdays. Students will not meet during holidays.

"Pre" Pre-Med 1, 2, or 3 Week Summer Residential Program at a Top University

(On-Campus | Fully Online via Zoom)

During the high school years, students participate in a 1, 2, or 3 week online and on-campus, summer intensive at a top university.

'So You Want to be a Medical Doctor?' Virtual Student Conference

(Online via Zoom)

The 'So You Want to be a Medical Doctor?' Virtual Student Conference is a free, international early outreach medical physician pipeline program offered monthly to elementary, middle, and high school students during the school year and summer via Zoom.
