Office of Diversity, Equity & Inclusion Presents...

'SO YOU WANT TO BE A MEDICAL DOCTOR?' VIRTUAL STUDENT CONFERENCE

A Free Medical Physician Career Exploration Event open to all Students & Families

OVERVIEW OF STUDENT CONFERENCE

The 'So You Want to be a Medical Doctor?' Virtual Student Conference is a free, international early outreach medical physician pipeline program offered monthly throughout the year (Fall, Winter, Spring, & Summer) via Zoom. The program is facilitated by medical school students, practicing medical physicians and scientists, and medical school faculty and leaders.

Participants are not required to attend each month and registrants will be able to indicate which conference dates they would like to attend.

EVENT PURPOSE:

The initiative was established to support the goal of the MPP Academy: To attract and build a diverse pipeline of future medical doctors, as early as elementary school, from all backgrounds that is more representative of the U.S. population.

ELIGIBILITY:

The program targets elementary (4th – 6th) and secondary (7th – 12th) grade students from all communities across the United States and globally, who might not have considered a career as a medical physician or are interested in pursuing a career in medicine or healthcare.

PROGRAM STRUCTURE:

During the school year, the virtual Student conference will be delivered from September - May as a school-wide event to elementary and secondary schools and their students across the globe.

During the summer, the virtual student conference will be delivered in June, July, and August directly to students, families, & summer camps across the globe.

Conference Activities & Schedule

The conference is comprised of the following activities:

The order of the activities scheduled during the student conference is subject to change.

Clinical Simulation Experience

9:00am - 9:45am

Students will be exposed to the techniques of doctors and other medical professionals during our clinical simulation. Each month, throughout the year, we will focus on a different clinical simulation.

Here is a list of some of the clinical simulations offered to students:

- ➔ Assessment of Vital Signs
- ➔ Identification of Lung Sounds
- ➔ Cranial Nerve Assessment Including Pupillary Light Reflex
- ➔ Acute Severe Asthma
- ➔ Diabetes and Diabetic Ketoacidosis
- ➔ Severe Allergic Reaction to Antibiotic
- ➔ Seizure and Hypoglycemia
- ➔ Heart Failure
- ➔ Heart Attack

This seminar will be divided into two cohorts: elementary (4th-6th grade) and secondary (7th-12th grade).

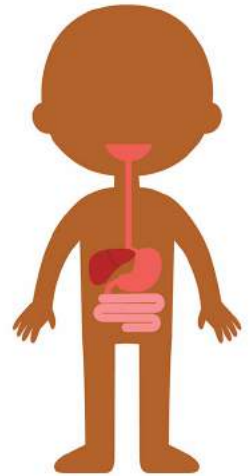

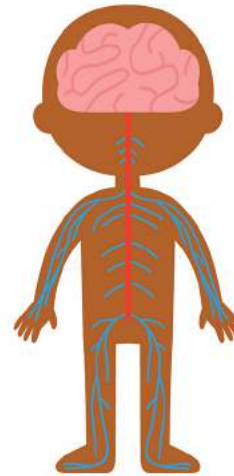

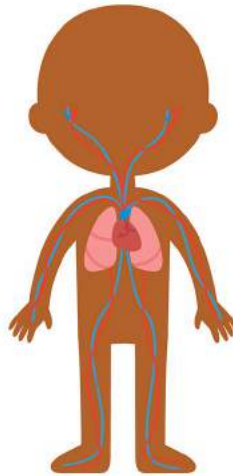

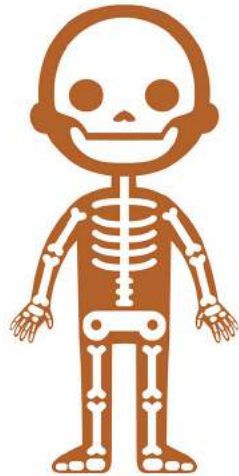

HUMAN BODY SYSTEMS

SKELETON

CIRCULATORY

NEVROUS

DIGESTIVE

Pre-College, Human Anatomy & Physiology Seminar

10:00am - 10:50am

- ➔ Students will participate in an engaging pre-college anatomy and physiology seminar taught by physicians and university professors from top medical schools.
- ➔ This seminar will introduce students to the 12 systems of the body where they will learn interesting ways the human body works. Each month, throughout the year, we will focus on a different system of the body.
- ➔ Moreover, students will explore different types of doctors, the branch of medical practice they focus on and how these specialities are connected to the systems of the human body.

This seminar will be divided into two cohorts: elementary (4th - 6th grade) and secondary (7th-12th grade).

Medical School Panel Discussion | Q&A Session Preparing for Pre-Medical University Coursework & Medical School

11:00am - 11:55am

- Participants will hear firsthand from medical school students, practicing medical physicians and scientists, and medical school faculty and leaders about their personal journey to medicine and why they chose to pursue a career in medicine.
- Participants will learn how they can begin preparing now as an elementary, middle, or high school student for future pre-med university coursework and medical school.

This seminar will be divided into two cohorts: elementary (4th - 6th grade) and secondary (7th - 12th grade).
